

Kgalalelo Kedijang is a CEO/Attorney at The Creative Bar, a law firm specialising in human and women's rights in Africa and the legal protection of indigenous and traditional knowledge, creative works and intellectual property.

Kgalalelo was admitted as an attorney of the High Court of South Africa and was part of the legal team that won a landmark case in favour of gender-based violence victims against the Minister of Police.

Kgalalelo has also been known as an activist. She has presented to the United Nations Council regarding Climate Change and foreign policy to combat it. Kgalalelo has also been appointed as a next-generation woman leader for McKinsey and Company. She is also a board member of the Presidential Response Fund to fight gender-based violence. Kgalalelo won the South African Media Innovation Programme for using digital media for effective change. She has also directed a play showcased at the Market Theatre. Kgalalelo is awakened by entrepreneurship, human rights, education, and the arts.

"NORMAL IS EXTINCT"

